CHAMBER OF COMMERCE THANKSGIVING DINNER HELD MONDAY NOON

Jones Lauds Spirit Of Civic Group At Big Meeting

Members of the Niles Chamber of Commerce held a realistic preview of Thanksgiving Day Monday when they met at the Florence restaurant in Niles for the annual Thanksgiving dinner. The attendance was large.

Roast turkey with all the fixings even down to the mince pie was on the menu, and visitors marveled at the luxurious fare of the Niles civic group. Among those who attended were Captain Hansen, a member, but rarely seen, George Helwig and F. T. Dusterberry.

When he was able to turn the attention of the group from culinary masterpieces on the table, President F. V. Jones opened the meet with a commendation of the members. He lauded their spirit and accord, and voiced the satisfaction in being president of the organization. He then reminded the members of the P. T. A. play staged last night at the Veterans' Memorial building. He pleaded for support of the production.

Supervisor Ralph V. Richmond spoke on the unemployment relief being made possible in this region through the federal government. He stated that branch offices, where worthy unemployed could register for work, would be opened up in the southern part of the county. He intimated that the Niles office would be instituted at the court house yesterday morning All those unemployed who have been receiving help from the county are to be given an opportunity to work on various county projects at least until February. The wage will be fifty cents an hour for a thirty hour week, Richmond said. He added that for the first time, those who have voiced their intentions of becoming citizens would be eligible to sign for work. Richmond stated that no project had as yet been worked out for this region, but that a drainage project near Warm Springs was pending.

President F. V. Jones, in his address to the chamber, stated that we should all be thankful for the sportsmanship and character of American people in time of stress, and that our sacrifices would not be in vain, but would bear the fruits of happiness here.

E. D. Bristow, concluded the meet with a reading of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's Thanksgiving proclamation.

Next Monday , Mr. E. Wilson will address the Niles group on the favorable side of the Central Valley Water project to be voted upon on December 19. The other side of the question will be presented a week from Monday, Jones said.

WATER DIVERSION INTO SUB-SURFACE GRAVELS PLANNED

Survey Of Project West Of Niles Almost Completed

Designing to direct a large percentage of the Alameda Creek flood waters into the sub-surface gravels this winter, the Alameda County Water district is this week completing a survey for a large diversion ditch from the stream channel west of the town of Niles to a large pit dug some time ago by a gravel concern.

According to Wm. E. Dutra, surveyor, the cut will be made from the present channel at a level that will allow free flow into the pit during times of high water. A check gate will be employed to prevent back-flow into the stream when the temporary floods subside.

In addition to the above plan, the Water District is tentatively planning to install a pump to lift water rom the channel into a smaller pit to the east of the large one.

The bottoms of the creek channel and of the two pits are to be scoriated, and shattered with dynamite to facilitate the flow into the gravel layers.

It is said that in addition to raising the water level in the gravels, the new project will give a medium for flood control. Water that heretofore inundated the low reaches about Alvarado will be partially diverted into the gravels near Niles.

Since the project is situated west of the Irvington-Niles fault line, the most benefit will fall to the region about Centerville and Newark. The Niles area will be benefited in that the flow over the fault will be lessened by the raising of the table west of it.

Richard White, of Centerville, is assisting Dutra in the preliminary survey and estimating of the project.

THREE HURT WHEN AUTOMOBILE HITS R. R. SECTION CAR

Freak Accident South Of Niles Saturday Morning

Three Western Pacific section workers were critically injured last Saturday morning at 9:00 in a freak accident at the grade crossing of the Western Pacific at the south end of the bridge near Niles.

The injured are: Gaspara Martinez, Sacramento Sabola and Juan Castro, all railroad workers. Sabola was foreman of the crew. Mrs. Bier, of Fairfield, was driver of the machine which crashed into the car.

According to reports, Mrs. Bier, driving south over the bridge, failed to see the section car as it emerged from behind the tower house. The workers, evidently thinking the road was clear proceeded to cross the highway. Topping the bridge at a moderate speed, Mrs. Bier was unable to stop her car, and all efforts of the workers to speed up their vehicle were unavailing. The resulting crash demolished the section car and scattered the riders down the steep embankment beside the tracks. Mrs. Bier was unhurt.

All of the injured were rushed in the office of r. E. C. Grau where they were given first aid treatment.

CHRISTMAS SEAL SALE TO BEGIN ON NOVEMBER 30

Christmas seals, symbols of war against tuberculosis, will go on sale throughout Washington township on Thanksgiving day.

Mrs. J. E. Thane is chairman of the township seal sale committee, and committees working under her direction have prepared the letters containing Christmas seals for the mail.

Funds received from the sale of Christmas seals support a year round program for the prevention of tuberculosis, according to the Alameda County Tuberculosis Association.

They go into the schools to help discover children who have early tuberculosis. They send workers into homes to help those who are ill and they provide care for hundreds of children at Del Valle Preventorium, near Livermore.

Christmas seals sold this year will enable the tuberculosis association to continue the year round program for the control of tuberculosis in Alameda county.

Thanksgiving Proclamation

By the President of the United States of America

I Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, do set aside and appoint Thursday, the thirtieth day of November, 1933, to be a day of thanksgiving for all our people. May we on that day in our churches and in our homes give humble thanks for the blessings bestowed upon us during the year past by. Almighty God. May we recall the courage of those who settled a wilderness, the vision of those who founded the nation, the steadfastness of those who in every succeeding generation have fought to keep pure the ideal of equality of opportunity and hold clear the goal of mutual help in time of prosperity as in time of adversity.

May we ask guidance in more surely learning the ancient truth that greed and selfishness and striving for undue riches can never bring lasting happiness or good to the individual or to his neighbors.

May we be grateful for the passing of dark days; for the new spirit of dependence on one another; for the closer unity of all parts of our wide land; for the greater friendship between employers and those who toil; for a clearer knowledge by all nations that we seek no conquests and ask only honorable engagements by all peoples to respect the lands and rights of their neighbors; for the brighter day to which we can win through by seeking the help of God in a more unselfish striving for the common bettering of mankind.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Seal of the United States to be affixed.

(Signed)

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

LUCAS HOME NEAR NILES DESTROYED BY FIRE TUESDAY

Firemen Battle Blaze Swept By High North Wind.

Striking at noon yesterday, and swept by a high wind, flames destroyed the home of Mrs. A. Lucas, on Morrison avenue, south of Niles, in spite of the efforts of the Niles firemen to save a portion of the structure.

Starting on the roof, which was partially covered with tar roofing, the blaze quickly ate its way down into the house. Vast clouds of black smoke and burning embers flying down the wind kept the firefighters from approaching the building from the front. What furniture could be seized throcgh the rear entrances yas saved. Several valuable sets of books and several paintings were rescued.

According to Mrs. Lucas, she became aware of the flames when she left the house for a moment at noon. She stated that smoke was pouring from the eaves. Mrs. Lucas was unable to state the cause of the blaze, but firemen suggested that a spark fro mthe chimney, driven by the high wind lodge in a crevice in the shingles.

Niles firemen and spectators are to be commended on the efforts they made to save the household articles.

Mrs. Lucas had lived in the house for several years. Her three sons, Joe, Tony and George, live with her.

Until they are able to secure another place, the Lucas will stay in the old Pickering piace, adjoining theirs. Joe Lucas stated that F. H. Moore kindly offered them this convenience.

FALL OF DARKNESS ENDS HAYWARD-NILES GAME 8-ALL

Bellini's Double Ties Score Eighth Inning of Lively Contest

Thickening darkness Sunday halted the Niles C of C's in a victory march against the Hayward Eagles at the Niles grammar school grounds after the Niles boys had focght their way from behind to tie the score 8 all.

Niles last bid for a win evaporated when Cull's line drive to center field in the tenth inning was pulled down in a breath-taking catch. Just a minute before Duarte's double with two men on base brought in the tying run 8 to 8. Bellini was hit by a pitched ball and the bags were loaded. Cull came to bat. Had his drive been just a little higher, the score would have been 12 to 8.

Trailing 8 to 6 at the start of the eighth inning, Niles tied the score when Bellini, hitting star of the day slashed out a double with C. Pine on third and Cahill on first. Both scored.

Hayward found Ray Duarte regularly throughout the first innings of the game. Art Mederios, rushed in to stem the tide, let the Hayward boys down with only two hits for the rest of the contest.

Raso at short and Cahill at first did some stellar work. Cahill figuring in a double play unassisted.

Betty and Her Barn

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

WNU Service
©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

WHEN the wolf prowled near enough to the door of the old Wycliff estate to cause young Betty Wycliff serious anxiety she decided that the most sensible thing to do was to sell the old home itself and take up her abode in the stable—commonly called the barn. The new owners were quite willing that she should keep the barn since they would be putting up modern garages.

Its position was in direct line of the railway approach to the glowing little suburb, which, before its tendency to sprout, was justly called Offthemap. But with a generous supply of the fertilizers—builders, estate office, butchers, etc.—the growth began and they wisely changed the name to Onthemap.

So Betty's old barn stood like a veritable lighthouse in its prominent position on High street.

The prowling footpads of the wolf were too close for Betty to have done much except install a bathroom and kitchen and hardwood floors in her barn. She wanted very much to make good in the little village in which all her forefathers had been reared. An attractive sign down at the rustic gate leading to the barn informed the passerby that Miss Wycliff taught dancing and elocution.

Betty's pupils were not so numerous as to effect a traffic block in High street.

It was between a dance and an elocution lesson that Betty watched the approach of a young man.

Betty soon learned that he was the owner of the new department store that was even then nearing completion in the heart of Onthemap's shopping district.

"Miss Wycliff," he jumped straightway into his reason for intruding, "I will pay you $500 down and another $500 when the sign's finished if you will rent out that east wall of your barn to me for advertising purposes—it's a swell site to catch the eye and it need not be too—er—advertisy—as it were. What do you say? I'll get an artist that knows his job—"

"Wait a moment," cried Betty, "until my brain regains its poise. I never see the outside of my barn—at least not on that side and—a thousand dollars a year would mean an awful lot to me. Do you think—that is—could it be done without a lot of printing?"

"If I have my artist chap consult you before beginning—will that do? And if Onthemap grows as it's bound to and takes my store along with it, you shall have double that rental in another year." And seeing consent in Betty's eyes he arose, squeezed her hand until she nearly squealed and was off to arrange with his artist.

He had not been gone an hour when the owner of the new butcher shop came up the path with the selfsame dreams of an advertisement in his head and the exact same figures in the way of rental.

"But I simply couldn't stand it to have pictures of sausages and those sides of lamb and beef rioting on my barn walls," cried Betty.

"The decorative scheme shall be left entirely to you," said the young butcher, quite overjoyed at the site he had secured.

She retired in a somewhat wilted state to her little kitchen to brew herself a cup of tea. Certainly having walls to one's barn was a greater asset than having a brain in one's head for the teaching of dancing and elocution.

So while Betty sipped her comforting cup of tea the owners of the department store, the butcher shop and the baker shop were one by one dickering with the only artist that Onthemap had ever known. He was but a visitor.

His efforts to secure fame and fortune in miniature painting had so far failed, and it was with extreme joy that he welcomed the orders to take up his brushes in the interest of advertising.

"But you must consult the owner of the barn," each had warned him.

"I have a scheme that will suit her," laughed the artist. "We will simply paint crowds of well-dressed people rushing toward the open doors of the shops of you three good gentlemen. It will be a subtle and attractive way of doing the trick."

And because Betty had a brain in her head she promptly started a tea and coffee room in conjunction with elocution and dancing. Young Martin Wells, swinging on his painting scaffold, thought the world a lovely place and wondered why he had ever puddled about with little dabs of paint when he could splash it in bucketfuls on the barn walls of the most lovely girl that either town or suburb had ever produced.

Betty stepped out from time to time to admire the work of the young artist and to gaze wonderingly up at anyone who could so transform the flat walls of a barn into dreams of color. She knew, too, that he would one day be a leading mural decorator and that she—but what else Betty knew was being expressed beautifully in young Wells' eyes as he gazed happily down at her.

By ALICE DUANE

WNU Service.

"WELL, I just won't go." Hot, rebellious tears stung Lynn Atwater's big gray eyes. "I won't go. I can't go!"

She glanced again at the letter in her clenched hands. It was from her aunt. And Aunt Matty, Lynn had to admit, was doing her share of things—cooking and sewing, cleaning, washing and ironing, for Lynn's younger sister and brother. No matter how much money Lynn could give her, she could never repay Aunt Matty for the love and attention she had given Betty and Jack.

Aunt Matty never fell down on her job. Lynn kept up her end, too. She sent every cent she could spare to the little country town where Aunt Matty and the youngsters lived.

The letter in Lynn's hands, beneath its amusing recital of family doings, showed real need for more money. Jack was growing so fast that he was just walking out of all his clothes, wrote Aunt Matty. They were eating in the kitchen—the dining room ceiling was cracked. Mr. Mitcham, who had come to look at it, had said it must be replastered.

Well, thought Lynn, Aunt Matty had always had enough to live nicely and keep her little house in beautiful condition. She must be spending heaps on Jack and Betty—she was, of course, in spite of the best Lynn could do.

So she wouldn't go. It all came back to the same decision. She couldn't go.

For weeks Lynn had been saving a bit here, a bit there. Enough, she had hoped, so that she might accept Elise Carlton's invitation to a house party in August at her father's Adirondack camp. Elise had been one of Lynn's friends at college. It seemed strange to Lynn that Elise still had another year of college before her. In her holidays at home, this last year, Elise had looked Lynn up and had entertained her at dinner several times at her Park avenue apartment. There Lynn had met Barton Stark. And, Elise had said, Barton was to be a guest at the same house party to which Lynn was invited. Barton was good looking, rich and about thirty, with charming manners. He had showed interest in Lynn. But he had never looked her up. The thought of meeting him at Elise's house party had helped Lynn through the hot, grinding work of July. And now she couldn't go. Even if she let Elise buy her railroad ticket—and Elise had put the thing so tactfully that Lynn could hardly refuse—she must have money for clothes. Now she knew there would be no money for clothes, and that the house party was off, with all its possibilities. She sat down and wrote two letters—one to Elise, saying that duty, horrid duty, had interfered with her vacation plans; she had decided she just must spend the whole of her short two weeks in the country; the other letter to Aunt Matty, enclosing a check for all her saved-up vacation money. "And be sure you have the new ceiling up by the time I come home. I've decided to spend all my vacation with you," she added, "and I'd hate to have the ceiling fall on my head."

The rest of the summer was insufferably hot to Lynn, without the alluring prospect of the house party before her. And the night before her vacation began—Friday night—she felt utterly discouraged and unhappy. She was pressing and packing such shreds of a wardrobe as she had, when her doorbell rang.

She pushed the button that opened the front door, and then waited impatiently at the head of the stairs for her visitor. And there, bounding up the stairs, was Barton Stark.

The shabby little room disappeared—for Lynn. Barton saw it, in all its significance. But in its midst he saw Lynn, flushed and tremulous as she welcomed him, trying not to show too great surprise and pleasure.

"You see, I was at Elise's camp." Barton talked in a practical, matter-of-fact voice, and gradually Lynn's embarrassment disappeared. "And I expected you were coming tomorrow. But she told me you weren't coming. So here I am!"

He walked over to Lynn's one window and gazed from it as if it had looked out over a beautiful garden or the sea instead of a cluttered city.

"It's a lovely night," he exulted. "Let's go have dinner, now. Then you come back and finish packing and get a good sleep. And in the morning let's motor up to the country—Elise told me where your family lives—all about them. Is there any sort of a hotel or inn there?"

"Oh, yes!" breathed Lynn. "Quite awful. Mrs. Mitcham keeps it. The White Horse. But it's clean."

"Well, I'll stay there. And every day we'll se each other and we'll motor the youngsters and your aunt around a lot—would they like that, Lynn?"

"Oh, yes!"

"And Lynn, would you?"

Lynn's face suddenly lit up with a smile. "You're asking me?" she retorted.

Little Gray Car

By CHARLES TILTON

OLIVE swung the bag carelessly as she walked; it was a beautiful thing, of oriental brocade in peacock shades. Larry Deane had given it to her on her birthday, shortly after their engagement, and she cherished it above all her treasures save the beautiful cluster of diamonds on her fingers. Because she was quarreling with Larry, she had willfully included the bag in her wrath and twisted it mercilessly on the end of its golden cords.

"The cord will break and you will lose the bag," cautioned Larry.

Olive pondered provokingly. "There are some really precious things in it—my vanity case, my gold purse, the birthday gift Joe Watterson gave me, one of his letters, and—"

"Isn't that enough?" glared Larry, for they had been disagreeing about Joe's attentions to Olive.

"Enough letters from Joe? Well, he is interesting, Larry—so good tempered. One enjoys him, you know."

"I know one who doesn't enjoy him—although he's a cheerful sort of an idiot."

"The cheerful ones are the nicest, just the same," tossed Olive over her shoulder as his little gray roadster turned into the driveway of her father's house.

"Hmmmmm!" remarked Larry disagreeably.

As he helped her out and she released her hand, he discovered that she had left the cluster-of-diamonds ring in his palm. He grew white and stared at her.

"You mean that, Olive?"

"Of course."

"Why?"

"You do not trust me—you are jealous."

"I am sorry you believe that—I said nothing until you criticized my dancing with Ella—well, what does it matter? If you really cared, you could not play with happiness in this way. Good-by," he said.

Olive watched him with unbelieving eyes; as he went the gray car became a blur because she was crying. When her mother inquired why she wept Olive confessed that she had lost her beautiful brocade bag.

"How careless," chided Mrs. Dare. "Perhaps it is in the car, dear. Shall I telephone to Larry?"

"No—no—please don't! I have given Larry back his ring—and I've lost his bag—and I never want any of them back again," announced Olive.

"You have lost something very precious," remarked her mother sadly.

IRVINGTON GIRLS' TEAM WALLOPS NILES

Holding her opponents to only one hit, Miss Irma Duta, pitcher and manager of Irvington Warriors, did some wonderful pitching which helped the team to win the first girls' baseball game played against the Niles Amazons at the Niles Grammar school Sunday morning by a score of 25 to 1.

The Irvington girls displayed some wonderful team work in the infield and outfield. Miss Dutra's pitching was exceptionally good and due to her good work the warriors had things their way through the entire game.

Miss Dutra was the star hitter for the day, getting six hits out of seven trips to the plate, one of which was a home run. The remainder of the team did some mighty fine hitting. Every member of the team displayed mighty fine team work with but a few errors checked against them.

The Niles girls were put out in one, two, three manner and but in two cases did they get to first base. Agnes Johnson, pitcher for he Amazons, received little cooperation from the remainder of the team. A score of errors were chalked up against the team, which counted greatly for the runs scored by the Warriors.

Lucille Oliveria was the only one to score a run for Niles, and Agnes Johnson, pitcher, was the to get a hit from Miss Dutra.

No substitutes were used in the Niles team. Ivington used three reserves, Mendonca replacing Bettencourt at right field in the beginning of the fourth; Vargas replacing Souza and Costa replacing Santos on the outfield at the beginning of the eighth inning.

The box score for Irvington was as follows:

YOUR BRAKES MAY GRIP But Will Your Tires?

On the slippery and darker roads of winter, you need the deep-biting, sure-holding grip of new Goodyears — and you need protection from tire changes in the cold.

You can get that protection about as cheaply as a year ago—and still have tires almost like new next Spring because new rubber lasts longer on cool roads.

Be wise — invest now in new Goodyears, ride safely, save money. This will be the 18th winter that more people rely on Goodyears than on any other tire. Let us show you why!

Morris Elsnab and Roy Stevenson, of Pleasanton, tied for high score at a practice shoot held at the Pleasanton American Legion Rifle Range located near Pleasanton, recently.

Elsnab and Stevenson made a score of 48 out of 50. Although that was the high score for the day that is not the best record made at the range.

In a competition shoot of twenty-two rifles Adolphe Banke won the honor of acting as host to a number who competed in the shoot. It was agreed that the one who shot an oak ball from a fence post first would treat for a dinner. Adolphe proved his marksmanship and acted as host.

Why Children Need a Liquid Laxative

The temporary relief children get from some synthetic, habit-forming cathartic may cause bowel strain, and even set-up irritation in the kidneys. A properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement. There is no discomfort at the time and no weakness after. You don't have to give the child "a double dose" a day or two later.

Can constipation be corrected in children? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" say many mothers who have followed this sensible medical advice: 1. Select a good liquid laxative. 2. Give the dose you find suited to the system. 3. Gradually reduce the dose until the bowels are moving regularly without aid.

An approved liquid laxative (one that is widely used for children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. The mild laxative action of this excellent preparation is the best form of help for children—and grown-ups, too. The dose can be regulated for any age or need.

OLD SPRING VALLEY WATER PIPE BRIDGE BEING DEMOLISHED

Structure, Long Disused, Was Constructed In the Year 1888

Having stood for decades a monument to the early days of Washington township, the old Spring Valley pipe line bridge, spanning the Alameda creek at Niles, is this week falling beneath the wreckers' bar.

Work of demolishing the historic structure was begun last Friday by a crew under the direction of W. F. Fredericks, for the Willet and Burr plant at Decoto. Fredericks stated that the iron and steel in the ancient span was in excellent condition in spite of years. He pointed out that coatings of rapite had preserved the metal.

According to Frank Nunes, who is well acquainted with water problems in this part of the valley, the old span was constructed in 1888, by the San Francisco Bridge company under the direction of Herman Schusler, then chief engineer of the original Spring Valley Water company. The span was first used to convey the large pipe across the Alameda creek channel. Water was taken from the dam in the canyon narrows, settled in a sand box at the pipe head, then run by brick pipe to another settling box near the old Vallejo mill; thence cross the creek to the San Francisco flume. The old bridge was one of the few remaining vestiges of the old system.

High water in the flood of 1911 washed away the southermost span of the old structure. The same flood destroyed the old road bridge. The present one was built immediately after.

The absence of the old superstructure of the water span will be noticed by those who have been used to its girders stretching across the canyon panorama.

Fire Siren Shatters Slumber Sunday Morn

Blaring into the early morning hours Sunday, the Niles fire siren routed out the members of the Niles department to seek what turned out to be something of a false alarm. The belt on the compressor at the Solon Service Station was slipping and the smoke caused by the friction resulted in the alarm being turned in. More mechaical adjustment was needed than water, and the firemen repaired to their beds to pick up their slumbers where they left off.

ELECTRIC and GAS SERVICE come so easily that it is natural to take the ever present supply for granted.

It is there, right at your hand, the instant you want it.

Isn't it true that you rarely think of what stands behind the button or the valve?

Yet a great and intricate system of power houses and power lines, of gas mains and distributing pipes, representing more than $700,000,000 of investment, has been built just to put that easy, dependable service at your finger tips.

That is an enormous investment, but it is not any one man's money, nor the money of any score of men. More than 90,000 persons, 70,000 of them living in California, have put their savings into this business.

They are just the average run of folks, industrious, thrifty, many of them depending upon their dividends for their living.

These dividends are like pay checks. They go to pay the grocer, the baker, the candlestick maker; they help to keep things going in every community and in every line of business.

Also it takes a regular army of workers to make sure you have that service. P. G. and E. employs 10,600 men and women. They make their homes in every part of Northern and Central California.

Their wages amounting this year to more than 15 million dollars, flow into stores, factories, homes, theaters, quickening business and stimulating trade in more than 600 cities and towns.

Our service goes to 1,250,000 customers. It is always the best service that a faithful and conscientious organization can give.

We are in California . . . of California . . . for California.

Now! Ease Sore Throat Instantly!

Crush and dissolve 3 Bayer Aspirin Tablets in half a glass of water.

2 GARGLE thoroughly — throw your head way back, allowing a little to trickle down your throat.

3 Repeat gargle and do not rinse mouth, allow gargle to remain on membranes of the throat for prolonged effect.

Remember: Only Medicine Helps Sore Throat

Modern medical science now throws an entirely new light on sore throat. A way that eases the pain, rawness and irritation in as little as two or three minutes!

It requires medicine—like BAYER ASPIRIN– to do these things! That is why throat specialists throughout America are prescribing this BAYER gargle in place of old-time ways.

Be careful, however, that you get real BAYER Aspirin for this purpose. For they dissolve completely enough to gargle without leaving irritating particles.

PLEASANTON DAY WAS CELEBRATED SATURDAY AT TANFORAN

Honoring the Pleasanton Horsemen who have entered their race horses at Tanforan during the past season, managers of the Tanforan horse racing track arranged for a Pleasanton Day held at Tanforan last Saturday.

The second highest purse of the season being $3,000 was offered.

The purpose of calling it a Pleasanton Day was to honor the town for being the raising and training center of a large number of the horses which have been racing daily at Tanforan. Pleasanton horses have been winning purses daily there.

The Pleasanton merchants in order to show their appreciation to the Tanforan Race Track managers purchased a large floral piece shaped like a horseshoe which was placed on the neck of the horse winning the race. Miss Beverly Rosa, daughter of Mrs. Mabel Rosa, of Pleasanton, who acted as Goddess of Liberty at the 1933 Pleasanton Fourth of July celebration placed the floral piece on the horse's neck.

Why did you buy this NEWSPAPER?

SUPPOSING that, beginning tomorrow, all the newspapers are discontinued. What a furore the public would make "News! News! We must have news or we will be no better off than the ancients." All right, suppose we give them news but cut out the advertisements.

Then you would discover that politics, the doings of society, notices of fires, accidents, deaths, scandals, sports, the activities of the police and criminals add little or nothing to the real comfort and happiness of this greatest age in the world's history.

Advertising is the NEWS of all the looms, of all the furnaces, of all the laboratories, of all the shops, of all the stores, of all the world, AND ALL WORKING FOR YOU.

Because of advertising, luxuries and necessities that once cost a king's ransom are yours at little prices. Advertising pits merchant against merchant, artisan against artisan, producer against producer, for your benefit, forcing out the best there is in everything and telling the world about it.

Read advertising. Keep abreast of today. Advertising furnishes you with facts and opportunities that otherwise you would never know.

NILES AMAZONS ON SHORT END OF 30-1 SCORE

Confronted with an almost professional aggregation in the form of the well drilled Irvington team, the Niles Girls Baseball team Sunday morning went down to the lopsided score of 30 to 1.

Playing good steady ball for the first few innings, and holding the Irvington team to three runs for that length of time, the Niles girls wilted in the fourth frame and were unable to collect themselves. A significant fact shows that the Irvington team made only five clean hits, all of the runs being scored on Niles errors.

Among the Niles girls who played good ball were Ramona Mello, center fielder; Lucile Oliveria, who scored the only run for Niles, and Pat Bliss, who was a demon at shortstop, backing up third and second until she became tired by the fast pace.

The crowd was large and appreciative. Future games will furnish more thrills, according to Mrs. Gladys Crane, Niles manager, Mrs. Crane will drill her charges all this week in preparation for a game a week from Sunday.

Decoto will start a team soon, which, with several others formed in other toyns, will make the league more interesting.

The starting lineup for Niles was:

Agnes Johnson, pitcher; Mary Souza, catcher; Mary Franco, 1st base; Mary Corrieo, 2nd base; Ollie Manuel, 3rd base; Patricia Bliss, shortstop; Easala Moise, left field, and Ramona Mello, centerfield. Gladys Duarte and Dorothy Seeburer, utility.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman H. Parks will celebrate the holiday with a dinner in San Francisco tomorrow.
